

Dealing with Depression

By: Laura Williamson

Depression is difficult to diagnose, especially when you have lupus, as the symptoms for lupus and depression overlap. It is important to identify depression and its impact on overall health, so that it can be properly treated. There are many factors which may contribute to depression such as work, family and financial burdens. This article outlines the factors of depression and related coping strategies.